W. J. Deboe, Chairman, J. R. Clark, Health Officer.

The schools and churches were mmediately closed and every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease, and no eases have as yet appeared in other families. The prompt and commendaole action of the Board of Health and the readiness with which the people answered their call, it is hoped, will effectually prevent the spread of this dreadful disease. In response to our request the following article was prepared by a prom-

Fattening Swine Proparatory to Converting Them Into Pork and Bacon. Feeding for Lean Meat.

the meat barrels for the next period; hence it is not out of place to mention some of the recent innovations on the old time methods of fattening the animals, and especially hogs, preparatory to converting them into pork and bacon.

As long as corn is grown in this country, with its large proportion of foddor ing all classes of stock, and it is perhaps ducing pork of a firmer texture and of chins. better quality than nunny other foods used for fattening.

While, however, it is desirable to se-"et of corn is not the most economical or the best, either to produce weight or givo quality. It is cheaper to produce meat that con-tion as to fit it only for the production of lard, and it is a fact that in feeding for lean meat a greater weight of carcass is secured, and at no more expense than in producing an excess of fat. This is when an animal is given food containing the elements of growth of bone and muscle as well as of fat, the condition of the animal is sustained in a manner to permit of more perfect digestion and as-similation, and a greater appropriation for the support of the system, of the nutritions elements that are required, and which are more evenly distributed through the body, instead of the semidiseased condition produced when corn is given as an exclusive diet. Hence the farmer who diminishes the ration of sorn, allowing but a pection only, substituting therefor bran, middlings, milk and clover (cnt fine and scalded), win have his hogs larger, heavier, healthier and of better quality of flesh than from

While granting the advantages of a systematic method of feeding for the best results in producing the heaviest and best pork, the fact that prime lard brings a price that makes it desirable on the part of the farmer to have his hogs very fat is a serious obstacle in the way when the value of lean meat is desired. But, explains The Philadelphia Record, authority for the foregoing, the lean is simply interspersed with the fat, and the greater increase from the variety of food does not diminish the suppy of lard. The farmer will find that on those portions of the carcass from which the lard is procured but little difference will be observed, and the hog will be much more valuable as a whole.

Rust in Wheat.

The following communication was sent from Sydney to the bureau of agriculture of that colony by a writer who said that his practical experience of over twenty years in New South Wales had proved that rust in wheat can be prevented by adhering to the following system: The aud must be well worked during the temmer months. After the crop has been reaped the stubble must be burned or quickly got rid of, and the ground at ing time for the next crop. Plow deep, pnlycrize well, consolidate by rolling, sow early (from February to middle of April). The seed must be steeped for twelve hours in a strong solution of fourfifths bluestone and one-fifth ursenic and well dried with wood ashes before sowing, and care takeu that the seed is not cracked and damaged by machine thrashing. Sow lightly on rich, well worked land. About half a bushel to the acre of good sound seed is ample. He had realized the best results off very rich land by using only a peck to the acre-If manuro is required sheep manure is the best; any other must be well rotted and pulverized before using, if for present crop. Avoid plowing in stubble or any rubbish, unless the land is to be fallowed for a season. Keep all large stock out of cultivated land, particularly cat-tle. Avoid working land wet. By strictly adhering to the foregoing simple rules rust in wheat cau be prevented.

How Many Pigs Can Be Kept to a Cow. Numbered with the queries answered at the Farmers' institute at Cauton was the one. "How many pigs cau be kept to a cow?" Mr. T. D. Curtis, who answered the question, said:

The old rule was one. It depends somewhat on the cow. I say three, because no farmer can afford to give a pig nothing but milk. The milk is worth too much as an ald in the digestion of olid foods and in making succulency, which is an important part of a success ful system of feeding. So I say add enough bran, middlings, linseed meal and corn meal or other meal to the milk, and keep three pigs to a cow, and so make valuable manure and more pork.

Experiments with Grain.

The Minnesota Agricultural station reports an interesting case of crossing corn —namely, a yellow flint and a black sweet—that emphasizes the importance of pedigree in plants. Farmers are urged to develop varieties of corn to snit their to develop varieties of corn to suit their own soil, locality and requirements. Many experiments have been made upon seeding with rusted, frosted and frozen wheat. Frosted wheat, if well cleaned, is safe to use for seed. Frosted grain that is useless for milling is of no value for seed. The more thoroughly wheat is cleaned the better it is for seed. Tests should be made for gluten and percent-age of germination before sowing. Good gluten seems essential for a good crop.

Boos and Bee Hives. In a paper on bees, read before the Westfield Wisconsin institute, the Rev. James Bain said: "Apiarians have their favorite breed the same as other stockmen, so that with beginners either the Italian, Cyprian, Syrian, Holy Land or the brown German bee will sufficiently answer, yet I think the Italiau is the general favorite. The old box hive must general favorite. The old box hive must be laid aside with the sickle and hand loom as curiosities of antiquity, and some approved movable frame hive with supers and sections used. My experience with the Simplicity Langstroth and Wisconsin is that either is desirable, although I rather prefer the Wisconsin. Supers for honey in one pound sections are better in the ordinary apiary extracting; many yield greater returns, but require far more time and skill with a less general market. Wintering in a dry cellar with a uniform temperature of 45 degs. is my choice. Take them out when willow and a soft maple are in blossom. Put on supers as soon as clover blossoms appear. Feed weak colonies with honey or sirup made of coffee Craugar. Take honey to market crated in good shape, so that the maker's rated in good shape are the constant of the list of breeds which are a good breed, though less hardy the form the conditions will be set liabilities of the birds and then the conditions will be set liabilities of the birds be laid aside with the sickle and hand

An English pomologist gives his ideas as follows on the subject of root pruning: The operation should be performed as soon after the crops have been gathered as possible. Open a trench about eighteen inches wide at from two to three feet from the stem of the tree, giving more er less distance according to the age and size, and about the same depth, working the soil out pretty well from underneath the roots, with a view of severing any top or perpendicular ones that may be here, and cutting all those in the prescribed space clean away in the operaion. If the trees are vigorous and the natural soil in which they are growing is good, it may be returned to fill up the renches without additions of any kind the foundation. The process of making being made. But, on the other hand. hould both trees and soil show signs of dobility, the trenches should be filled in are pressed between the plates or passed with good, fertile loam, and the improvement in the crops in succeeding years will well pay for the trouble and labor. Really fruitful trees are often benefited as much by not pruning as by the pruning of the shoots. The slight check in growth lends to the production of short jointed limbs and the formation of strong, healthy fruit buds.

Select for breeding stock the best birds in the flock and put them in pens separate rom the others; twelve females to a male I have found to be the best. Give the breeding stock wido range and the eggs will be more fertile, and will hatch stronger, more vigorous chicks. The nearer we get to nature's methods the stronger the germ and the better start for the chick. With poor eggs the germ is poorly nourished and the chicks come forth weak and spindling. Poultry Houses Without Causing Draughts on the Fowls.

With a view to assisting novices in the wiso selection of breeds, the agricultural editor of The New York World makes the following suggestions:

Buccess in poultry keeping depends largely in the selection of a breed that is suited to the special requirements of the locality where it is to be reared. One of the first considerations is the soil. For, while almost any breed can be kept on a dry, sandy, chalk or gravel soil, there are many varieties that will not thrive where the ground is cold, damp or clayey. On wet, low lying lands ducks and geese are really the only poultry that can be kept with profit. On clay soils as high anthority as Beale advises that Dorkings, Spanish, Polish, Creves and La Fieche The first objects now with ponltry tight as possible, and all fissures, especially about the doors and windows, closed on the approach of cold weather. The employment of tar paper as a lining upon by many, not only because this makes the house warmer, but the odor The second point to be considered is of the tar is in some measure a check whether the birds are to be kept in conpaper is tarred felting.

The question of ventilation is an im portant one and worthy of consideration. The ventilation gained, however, at the expense of warmth does more harm than good, and direct draughts on roosting fowls create more disease than no ventilation at all. Not a few poultry keepers make holes in one end of the house, und let the air get in and out the best way it can. Others build their houses with the boards a little apart in order to provide a current of nir, and then wonder why there is no profit in poultry. Better far no ventilation in winter, except what is gained during the day by opening the doors and windows, than this reck less exposure of the fowls to draughts. But, explains the agricultural editor of The New York World, authority for the foregoing, there is a happy medium be undersold. between the two extremes of draught nd no ventilation. One plan is to form small chamber about midway between the eaves of the apex of the roof with boards, and then place at the end of this chamber a ventilating trap. By this neans there will be a current through the ventilating chamber that will carry off the vitiated air without causing draughts in the house itself. Wright advises for the ordinary poultry house an opening at the highest point of the roof, surmounted by a "fantern" of boards put together in the well known ashion of Venetian blinds. It must be borne in mind that the air of a poultry house does not become foul so quickly in cold as in hot weather, and therefore that much in the way of ventilation may be done by airing the houses luring the day, and employing some absorbent, such as dry soil, on the floor.

It is wise to sprinkle the floor often with some good disinfectant. Land plaster is a ready absorbent of odors. Another heap disinfectant is snlphate of copper diluted in water.

Comb Foundation. Prof. A. J. Cook, in his guide to bee eping, has the following to say or omb foundation; German thought and Yankee ingenuity have devised means for giving the bee a start in the important yet expensive work of comb building, and hence the origin of another great aid to the apiarist-comb foundation. For more than thirty years the Germans have used pressed sheets of wax as foundation for comb., In 1861 a Mr. Wagner secured a He was also the first to snggest the idea hay it will tend to make it higher headed. of rollers. It was not until 1874, how ever, that Frederick Weiss, a German invented a machine which brought the foundation into general use here. In 1876 Mr. A. I. Root brought the roller machine and foundation into general ase. Since that time improvements have been made on the machines both by Mr. Root and others. All of the improved machines give foundation of exquisite mold, and with such rapidity that it can be made chear and practicable. As Mr. Heddon says "The bees, in two days, with foundation, will do more than they would in eight days without." All who wish sac cess must use foundation often in the brood chamber and always in the sec tions, unless nice white couch is at band-Whoever has a hundred colonies of bees may well own a machine for himself. though it usually pays better to purchase the foundation is very simple. This sheets of wax of the desired thickness between the rolls, which are made so as to stamp either drono or worker foundation as desired. Worker is best, I think,

SUCCESSFUL POULTRY RAISING. Bensible and Phyla Suggestions from

even for sections.

Practical Foultry Grower. In a paper read before a Massachusetts farmers' club Mr. A. C. Hawkins, of Lancaster, Mass., recently made a number of useful suggestions, among them the following:

Don't make poultry a side issue if you want to succeed. Many of the most successful poultry raisers are women, they having the patience and tact and Intelli gent application necessary. Start with small numbers and study the steps, read the poultry papers and magazines and learn what others are doing and how they are doing it.

A house for 100 fowls should be 50 feet long by 12 wide, divided into two pens, and on each end of the house an open shed 25 feet long by 13 wide. The ground should be gravelly to avoid dampines; there should be six inches of dampnose; there should be six inches of clean, sandy gravel in the house, and a foot of dry leaves in the shed. A gravel-by, well drained soil is best for a poultry house, as dampness causes sickness. A southeast exposure is best.
